

The 5 Questions that Created Love & Autism

Our intentions matter. If you want to know why Love & Autism is not just another "autism" conference, look for the story behind the "why". Love & Autism was created because we asked these questions.

What if we changed the world!

What if we grew love within our community, rather than fighting over who is autistic enough or too autistic.

What if we pushed ourselves to create change and invited others to join us to tell a new story? What if we wrote this Love & Autism story together?

What if we looked at neurological differences with new eyes and demanded change of the medical model of autism where autistic people are routinely considered broken version of 'normal.'

What if we gave the power back to actually autistic voices and let them lead us, teach us, show us how to be better parents, how to challenge the status quo, how to accept ourselves fully, how to live authentically, how to become decent friends, lovers....humans.

What if we silenced the negative tragedy narrative that has been all too commonplace and allowed a new collective narrative to emerge - humanizing of all autistic people. What if we created a world where all autistic people were understood to be just people. Just like you and me, worthy of love and value, afforded a full capacity of human rights.

For more, go to www.loveandautism.com